

To whom it may concern

For being the Editor-in-Chief of the WSEAS Transactions on Computers, it has been brought to my notice that the paper

<http://www.journalijdr.com/automation-cyber-security-incident-handling-through-artificial-intelligence-methods>

is a copy of the original paper of the WSEAS publication

<https://www.wseas.org/multimedia/journals/computers/2019/a705105-066.php>

It has also been detected using Turnitin that when the WSEAS published this paper online, the paper in <http://www.journalijdr.com> did not exist!

WSEAS has sent numerous emails to the authors and to the Journal <http://www.journalijdr.com>, but nor the authors neither the journalijdr.com replied and nobody explained to us why this paper was published again in a different Journal.

The Authors published again this paper illegally and without any agreement and any consent of the WSEAS.

Prof. K. Sarma

Editor-in-Chief of WSEAS Transactions on Computers

(Kandarpa Kumar Sarma)

Professor and Head, ECE, GUIST, Gauhati University

Professor and Head
Department of Electronics and Communication Engineering,
GUIST Gauhati University